

CLINPHONE OPENS WEST COAST OFFICE TO SUPPORT LOCAL CUSTOMERS

ClinPhone, the global leader in clinical technology solutions, has established a new facility near San Francisco in response to the company's growing success in the region. With numerous West Coast companies having already benefited from using ClinPhone's technologies, this new office will provide customers within this district with a local point of contact. This is the latest development in ClinPhone's exceptional business growth over the past 12 months, which has seen a new office open in North Carolina alongside the expansion of the Chicago operation and the relocation of the New Jersey Headquarters.

The new office will become fully operational with project managers, operations and support staff all on hand to assist local clients within their own time zone, enabling increased face-to-face contact and trial consultations. Staff at the office will be on hand to provide expert project and account management throughout the entire business cycle.

Rob McGrady will head up the new office as West Coast Operations Manager and will be joined by Kit Harley who will fill the role of Operations Account Manager. Rob was previously based at the Princeton office and is one of ClinPhone's most senior employees. Kit has relocated from ClinPhone's Chicago office where he was one of the first employees.

Howard Goldberg, President of ClinPhone Inc, comments, "Customer service is a vital part of any successful business and ClinPhone prides itself on going that extra mile to provide the best possible support to all of our clients regardless of location. The opening of this new facility is testament to this. With the significant increase in our West Coast customer base, a dedicated office with local support was the next logical step. We are all extremely excited by this move which reaffirms ClinPhone's commitment to our customers."

The new office opened on March 1 2006 and is set to expand significantly over the next six months.
