NSW CELEBRATED IN RUSSELL CROWE'S LATEST MUSIC VIDEO

Destination NSW has partnered with Russell Crowe's musical project The Indoor Garden Party for the band's new music video for the single Out of Range, which features an array of spectacular New South Wales vision.

Destination NSW CEO Sandra Chipchase said the music video was a celebration of the beauty and unique landscape of the State.

"The Out of Range music video showcases more than 15 different spectacular locations throughout NSW, highlighting the depth and breadth of our exceptional State," Ms Chipchase said.

"This music video not only celebrates the beauty of NSW, but highlights the vast range of landscapes, attractions and experiences on offer to visitors travelling to every corner of the State.

"From the stunning coastal shots stretching from Bondi Beach to Newcastle, the hinterland and ranges of the Blue Mountains and Snowy Mountains, to the red dirt of Broken Hill and lush farmland of Russell Crowe's own Nana Glen property, the video reinforces that there is nowhere quite like NSW," she said.

The decision to showcase NSW in his music video comes as no surprise from Crowe, who is passionate about his home state. Having grown up in Sydney, the Oscar-winning actor and musician is also part owner of South Sydney rugby league side the Rabbitohs.

Out of Range is the latest single from album The Musical which was released on June 16, 2017. The album was curated by principal songwriter Crowe and features Canadian folk rock icon Alan Doyle and producer Carl Falk, as well as vocalists Scott Grimes and Samantha Barks. The album is available on all major outlets.
