EXCELLENCE IN CYBER DEFENSE

MILITARY MODEL EDUCATION

The military model begins with the Corps of Cadets. Students learn to lead and provide direction to their classmates under the Commandant's guidance. Following the chain of command and Corps structure, Cadets develop discipline, accountability, physical endurance, and character.

Engaging classrooms offer discussions, investigations, and project-based learning supplemented by interactive events with military leaders, politicians, business leaders, and professionals through the McMaster Center for Security Studies and Leadership.

Outside the classroom, experiential learning places Cadets at historical sites that are important to the nation, exposes them to renowned speakers, and enables engagement in off-campus activities.
