STAMP Student Experience --
Middle School Edition

LYLA JUNE JOHNSTON

STAMP 2021 Spring Keynote

Her dynamic, multi-genre presentation style has engaged audiences across the globe towards personal, collective and ecological healing. She blends studies in Human Ecology at Stanford, graduate work in Indigenous Pedagogy, and the traditional worldview she grew up with to inform her music, perspectives and solutions. She is currently pursuing her doctoral degree, focusing on Indigenous food systems revitalization.

An Indigenous musician, scholar and community organizer of Diné (Navajo), Tsétsêhéstâhese (Cheyenne) and European lineages.

STAMP ONE DAY VIRTUAL EXPERIENCE -- MIDDLE SCHOOL EDITION

An unique opportunity for middle school students across the Denver area to engage in a virtual one-day STAMP Conference, April 9, 2021.

Our STAMP high school student leaders have been working hard since September 2020 to develop their workshops. After facilitating to other high school students throughout the Fall 2020 series, and their curriculum has now been adapted for engaging middle school students!

Prior to the day of the event, middle school students will select 2 different workshops covering a wide array of topics including: digital allyship, environmental justice, anti-racism, and healthy relationships and wellness.

This experience will connect diverse students, in inclusive, open spaces where students can authentically share, discuss, and explore important topics that directly impact them.

STAMP empowers middle school students to lead through modeling active listening, critical thinking, and empathy.

Students will leave this experience feeling equipped with the tools needed to build more inclusive, responsive communities at their individual schools.
