FEELING THE PARK LOVE! GOOGLE 5 STAR REVIEWS:

We went to the fall harvest festival. The park was clean and the food is excellent. Lots of crafts and rides for the kids. Don't forget to get your DelGrosso's spaghetti sauce before you leave.

Love this park! ~ Chris Perry

It's always a great time at DelGrosso Park. We finished the season at Harvest Fest. There was so much stuff to look at and buy. They even had custom Legos there. The petting zoo was really nice, and food was as always really good. Can't wait until next year! ~ CJ Kuhn

The DelGrosso's Park & Laguna Splash Gift Shops and merchandise were highlighted in the national magazine Souvenirs, Gifts, & Novelties.

Director of Games and Merchandise Jim Mayall was interviewed for this publication. Great Job, Jim!

Marketing Director Amy Mearkle was awarded the Kiwanis Citizen of the Year Award on Sept. 28, 2022.

The event was held at the Blair County Convention Center, where members of the DelGrosso Family of Companies and Amy's family & friends joined in celebrating her on this well-deserved recognition.

Traditional Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA), which were created in 1974, are owned by roughly 36.6 million U.S. households. And Roth IRAs, created as part of the Taxpayer Relief Act in 1997, are owned by nearly 27.3 million households.¹ Both are IRAs. And yet, each is quite different.

Up to certain limits, traditional IRAs allow individuals to make tax-deductible contributions into their account(s). Distributions from traditional IRAs are taxed as ordinary income, and if taken before age 59½, may be subject to a 10% federal income tax penalty.

Generally, once you reach age 72, you must begin taking required minimum distributions.^{2,3}

For individuals covered by a retirement plan at work, the deduction for a traditional IRA in 2022 is phased out for incomes between $109,000 and $129,000 for married couples filing jointly, and between $68,000 and $78,000 for single filers.⁴

Also, within certain limits, individuals can make contributions to a Roth IRA with after-tax dollars. To qualify for a tax-free and penalty-free withdrawal of earnings, Roth IRA distributions must meet a five-year holding requirement and occur after age 59½. Like a traditional IRA, contributions to a Roth IRA are limited based on income. For 2022, contributions to a Roth IRA are phased out between $204,000 and $214,000 for married couples filing jointly and between $129,000 and $144,000 for single filers.⁵

In addition to contribution and distribution rules, there are limits on how much can be contributed each year to either IRA. In fact, these limits apply to any combination of IRAs; that is, workers cannot put more than $6,000 per year into their Roth and traditional IRAs combined. So, if a worker contributed $3,500 in a given year into a traditional IRA, contributions to a Roth IRA would be limited to $2,500 in that same year.⁶

Individuals who reach age 50 or older by the end of the tax year can qualify for "catch-up" contributions. The combined limit for these is $7,000.⁶

Both traditional and Roth IRAs can play a part in your retirement plans. And once you've figured out which will work better for you, only one task remains: open an account.⁷

Under the SECURE Act, in most circumstances, once you reach age 72, you must begin taking required minimum distributions from a Traditional Individual Retirement Account (IRA). You may continue to contribute to a Traditional IRA past age 70½ under the SECURE Act as long as you meet the earned-income requirement. 3.
